

q podcast: JUST GAY STUFF

At the tender age of 16, Lauren faced an unimaginable challenge: losing a battle with an autoimmune disorder that left her hospitalized and wheelchair-bound. Overnight, her life transformed from that of a typical teenager to one where she was unable to walk, talk, bathe, or do anything for herself. It was a dark period filled with uncertainty and hardship. However, Lauren's spirit remained unbroken.

As if that wasn't enough, in 2018, Lauren faced yet another daunting hurdle when she was diagnosed with over 20 pre-cancerous polyps. Once more, she confronted the diagnosis head-on, determined not to let it define her or dampen her spirit.

By the age of 29, life threw another curveball her way: heartbreak. It was a devastating emotional blow, but Lauren refused to let this, too, shatter her resilience.

Now, at 30, Lauren has emerged stronger than ever. She found not just a partner in Jess but a co-creator for an incredible venture that would turn her challenges into a platform for empowerment and advocacy. Together, they created Just Gay Stuff, a podcast dedicated to bringing queer voices to the forefront, celebrating the resilience and vibrancy of the LGBTQIA+ community.

Through Just Gay Stuff, Lauren and Jess are making waves, ensuring every story matters and every voice is heard. The podcast is a testament to Lauren's journey – from a hospital bed to becoming a beacon of hope and strength for many. Her story is one of indomitable will, proving that no matter the obstacles, one can rise above and create something truly remarkable.
